

Are you looking for work??

All of us have been on a journey since February. Many of us have had to work harder and longer hours than ever before and stress levels have soared. At the same time we are constantly being grateful for the job we still have, as so many others around us have lost theirs. (Like me). So, if you are one of those who have lost their job, are self-employed in an industry that is showing little sign of recovery or are furloughed and nervous about the future, your journey will be one of trying to find work. As a community we may be able to help. Each month someone can send in a short profile of themselves and just maybe a reader might have a lead, a link or a tip that could end up with some work, an interview or a job. The best way to find work is to reach out to your network. So be brave and tell your community who you are and what you are brilliant at. No age limit, you can be fresh out of uni or college or have been around for while! Go for it, you just never know who might be reading.....

Jo Hibberd – Marwood.

Email your profiles to me in a word document with around 100 words in a format similar to this:

Joanne Hibberd /Project Manager/Event Manager

I am a confident, passionate and insightful individual with excellent communication skills. I have had a successful international project and event management career with experience of multiple industries. Relationship management is one of my key strengths and I pride myself on inspiring trust and confidence with everyone I work with.

Jo.hibberd2012@gmail.com

My skills are (things I can do)

Planning
Problem Solving
Getting things done
Using my intuition
Organising
Communication in person
Leading

My traits are (what kind of person I am)

Positive
Fair non/biased
Honest
Polite
Energetic
Empathetic
Focused